Artist Statement I've always felt that an artist is really a verb. That is to say, that it is someone in the process of learning and constantly rediscovering who they are using the visual elements of fine art, which are basically form, shape, color, texture, paint, pencil, pen, or literally anything else that leaves a mark on a flat or 3-dimensional surface or any other physical elements an artist might choose to make their individual, idiosyncratic statements about who they are, and how they see and visually relate to the world around them."
